

Dr. Anver Kuliev received his PhD in Clinical Cytogenetics and Doctorate in Medical Genetics. He is a former Head of World Health Organization Genetic Program in Geneva, involved in development of community-based programs for prevention of genetic disorders, early approaches for prenatal diagnosis, CVS, and genetic risk approach to common disorders. He is currently a Research Director in Chicago-based Reproductive Genetic Innovations, involved in preimplantation genetics research. Dr. Kuliev is an author on over 200 papers in prenatal and preimplantation genetics, including 15 books in the above areas, with 5 of them in the field of preimplantation diagnosis.